PREFATORY NOTE

THE future historian who will some time follow in the steps of Frederick Chase and John K. Lord will doubtless give careful attention to the part played by the College in the World War. There will be a large fund of information available in the files of the college publications and in the official records and to those he will have to go. But the present volume will be of some assistance, as a compilation of the essential facts of the war days of the College and as presenting a cross section of its activities in the service of the country. Its immediate interest, however, is for the alumni and friends of the College as a record of service.

It would be interesting to follow the smaller groups of Dartmouth men as they served in this country and abroad; but lack of space forbids and this can only be hinted at in the individual records of the men. The introductory material therefore has to do principally with college activities as centered in Hanover.

A record involving some thousands of men must inevitably have its shortcomings. The war service as printed is transcribed from the sheets returned by the individual or his friends and a further opportunity for correction of proof has been given, but even here error may creep in. Despite repeated attempts to obtain information, it is probable that the lists omit mention of noteworthy service. Readers of the volume are therefore requested to send the Bureau of Alumni Records correction of any error or omission they may detect.

In its very nature such a record must be incomplete. The latest class whose war activities are recorded, except in the Students' Army Training Corps, is that of 1921. This is partly an arbitrary date and partly a logical one, since this was the last class whose members could freely enter the service without passing through the Students' Army Training Corps. An appreciable number of students still in College saw active service and without doubt others formerly in service will enter in subsequent classes. It is, therefore, the expectation that a supplement will be issued later containing what corrections and additions to the present record may be necessary. The present volume, however, discloses a record worthy to stand beside the long roll of service rendered by the College in the Civil War.

FOREWORD

AMID all of the opinions which have developed in regard to the issues of the World War and concerning its results, the worth of the contribution made by American college men, and the quality of the spirit in which this was made, have not been questioned.

And when the significance to the final result of the purpose and participation of college men in waging this war is sought, the effect upon the colleges themselves of what these men conceived and accomplished is not to be lost sight of. Whatever may be the disillusionment of the world at large in regard to benefits which it was thought might accrue to it as a result of the war, there is no disillusionment concerning the purposes and ideals which led college men into the struggle, for these purposes and ideals cannot be explained nor accounted for on any sordid grounds. Consequently, the reflex influence upon the colleges from which these men went has been a stimulating, a refining and an elevating influence.

It is therefore in accordance with the college good that reminders in its life and in its plant should be frequent of the part which its men took in this great struggle. We prize the presence of the memorials such as Mr. Tuck's gift of the monument to the memory of Richard Hall; or the beautiful shower room in the gymnasium, provided for by Stanley Hill's own bequest, supplemented by the generous gift of his parents; or the gun from the field of combat, presented by the French government; or the great memorial field to be given by the alumni as a center for the recreational activities of the College.

Now this outline of individual record is added, indicating, in abstract, the numerical representation of Dartmouth men in military and naval service and the variety of forms which this took.

Long years we have taken pride in the evidence of the prompt consciousness of the seriousness of the crisis in an earlier struggle and in the sense of obligation at that time which pervaded the undergraduates and the alumni of Dartmouth College. Question has even been raised sometimes whether, in the transformed life of the College and the various influences at work therein, there would be found the same willingness to forget self-interest and the same qualities of sturdy character which had been conspicuous at the time when the Union was endangered.

The answer to this query was given promptly and decisively by the men of their college generation, a half decade ago. This volume is in some measure a memorandum of that answer and is submitted to the Dartmouth alumni in grateful appreciation of the influence upon the College of the spirit to which hundreds upon hundreds of Dartmouth's men responded, and in loving memory of the more than five score who gave their lives for the cause in whose behalf they offered all.

DARTMOUTH WAR RECORD

"FRIENDS OF FRANCE"

THE American Field Service in France is the name given to the group of volunteer organizations of American citizens which were attached to the French Army doing ambulance and transport service before the arrival of the American Army in France. The Field Service was for administrative purposes incorporated in the Automobile Service of the French Army. This close connection between ambulance work and transport work will explain the transfers that took place from one to the other among the Americans who went abroad in the first instance to drive motor ambulances.

The first active indication of interest in service abroad was created in the undergraduate body through the initiative of George B. McClary '14 who, early in the Spring of 1915, urged among faculty and students that two ambulances should be purchased and four men from the student body sent abroad with them to join earlier established units of the Field Service. A committee composed of faculty, students and alumni was formed, a mass meeting held and popular subscription in the community started. Within a short time $2155.72 had been obtained, sufficient for the purchase and maintenance of two Ford ambulances. Four men were selected to go abroad with them, namely, George B. McClary '14, Richard N. Hall '15, Philip D. H. Smith '15, and Lionel V. Tefft '17. By the time they reached France, early in June 1915, three sections of the Field Service had been formed. Smith was assigned to Section Two and the other three to Section Three. The cars purchased by subscription in the College were inscribed "Dartmouth College" and were driven by these four undergraduates. So far as we know, they were the first Dartmouth men, whether alumni or undergraduates, to be connected with the Field Service. They contracted for a period of six months and their term expired in November of that year. By this time Richard Hall's older brother, Louis P. Hall '11, was in the section with him and Richard remained beyond the period of his original service driving his ambulance until his brother's term of six months should have expired. He, as all Dartmouth men know, was killed by a chance shell Christmas Eve 1915, the first of all Americans in the Field Service to lose his life. Almost a year later Howard B. Lines '12 died of pneumonia at the front. In memory of these two men, the parents of Hall presented to the Field Service another car which bore the inscription, "The Dartmouth Car, in honor of Howard B. Lines and Richard N. Hall."

The First Two Units at the Pier, May 1917.

From the time that the first four made their way to the front among the "Friends of France," as those were called who joined the Field Service, graduates and undergraduates one by one crossed the ocean to take their places also in the Field Service. By the time the United States entered the war we had George Dock Jr. '16, Cortland J. Myers Jr. '17, Lyman T. Burgess '18, Arthur L. Howell '16, and Appleton T. Miles '16 in the Field Service. We find also that Carl E. Buck '14 was serving with the American Sanitary Commission in Serbia and later as driver for the American Red Cross in the same country, while Charles D. Horton '15 was driving an ambulance in the Norton-Harjes Motor Ambulance Service.

The next noteworthy and inspiring departure from Hanover for service with the "Friends of France" took place at the end of April 1917, about three weeks after the declaration of war by the United States. A group of forty-four undergraduates, impatient of remaining on the campus slowly training for active service, determined to get abroad at the first opportunity and succeeded in making arrangements to become incorporated in the units of the Field Service as soon as they could reach France. They sailed from New York on May 5, 1917. This group is commonly known as the "First and Second Dartmouth Ambulance Units." When they arrived in France they discovered that they would have to wait two or three weeks before the detachment could be equipped with ambulances and supplies and sent forward. Growing restive under inaction twenty-four of them immediately volunteered for the Motor Transport section of the French Army in which some of them remained for several months, forming part of units 133, 184, 397 and 526. In due time the twenty who had stayed behind in Paris were incorporated in Field Service Section No. 28 and sent to the front. These twenty served together for several months, during which time Paul G. Osborn '17 and Stanley Hill '18 were killed while heroically performing difficult and dangerous duty.

The American Sections attached to the Field Service were militarized by the United States in November 1917. By that time one hundred and eighteen Dartmouth men had volunteered in the various sections. When the American forces began to arrive in France, the members of the Motor Transport sections and the Field Service sections were given an opportunity of enlisting as individuals in any form of service in the French or American forces. Forty-two enlisted in the United States Army Ambulance Service or the United States Motor Transport Corps, thus continuing the kind of work they had been doing since they first reached France. Dartmouth men had been distributed among eighteen ambulance sections and five motor transport sections.

Both the ambulance sections and the motor transport sections had operated on almost all points of the western front from the level and muddy country near the British Channel to the mountain districts of Alsace. All were in equal danger from the shells of the enemy, but the most dangerous from the standpoint of the territory itself was the part of the front served by Section Three in the Vosges Mountains where the roads were poor or there were no roads at all. The snows of winter made operation here infinitely more difficult and dangerous. It was on a mountain side of this part of the front that Richard Hall met his death among the snows of late December driving his car down a mountain side in the darkness of early morning without lights to guide him. Later this section operated for a short time on the Lorraine Front and at Verdun. In the autumn of 1916 the French Government requested that they be sent with French troops into Serbia because they were the most experienced of all the Field Service in mountain work. They remained in the vicinity of Monastir until the autumn of 1917, except for a brief period in Greece. Their work was entirely in rough, hilly country for which they were so admirably fitted. In October 1917 the section was disbanded and its members were recalled to France.

Apart from Section Three, we had more men in Sections Two, Twenty-eight and Sixty-six than in all others combined. Section Two served at Pont-à-Mousson on the Lorraine front for ten months and at Verdun for more than a year and a half. When they passed into United States Service they were known as Section 626 and were still attached to the 48th French Division of zouaves and Algerians. They took part in campaigns near Soissons, at Montdidier, and in the Champagne. They followed the Division into Germany after the armistice.

Section Twenty-eight had a larger representation of Dartmouth men than any other single section. They served with the 134th French Division of Infantry in the shell-torn roads and fields of the Champagne sector almost continuously until they were enlisted in the United States Army Ambulance Service as Section 640. They continued with the same French Division after militarization, working to the northwest of Reims and in the city itself during its bombardment. The most difficult task in this sector was in connection with the retreat from Reims between May and July 1918. The section saw its next active service with the 91st Division of the American Army during fifteen days of the terrific drive through the Argonne Forest. Finally they followed the Army of Occupation into Germany where they remained until they were disbanded in March 1919.

Section Sixty-six was formed early in July, 1917, and worked on the front to the east of Soissons and later north of the Aisne near the Chemin des Dames. In September, 1917, it became U. S. A. A. S. Section 623. They were attached to the 61st French Division in May, 1918, and were in the retreat of the French westward from Soissons where the section was put to a most severe test. The next assignment was on the Lorraine sector in which the work was comparatively light. They were soon transferred to the Champagne sector when the final allied offensive began.

At the time of the armistice they were at Mézières. They proceeded with their troops as far as Luxembourg where their service came to an end.

Those who entered the Transport Service of the French Army, fifty-nine in number, formed part of three Groups in the Réserve Mallet. The Réserve was composed of a well organized system of sections to carry extraordinary supplies during emergencies. Each section was commanded by an American "chef." Between May and October, 1917, the Dartmouth sections served much of the front between Soissons and Reims and distinguished themselves particularly in the French drive along the Chemin des Dames. In October, 1917, the force was militarized, but some remained in the same service with the French Army while others entered the teaching staff of the American Transport School. Those who continued in this work assisted in the English drive on Cambrai, where tanks were first used. In 1918 they took French troops and artillery to the front during the German offensive of early spring and a little later along the Aisne hauled ammunition to the French forces and carried refugees back in the disastrous retreat. In June, at Château-Thierry, when the American offensive started, they took Americans of the 26th Division and Marines to the front. Thereafter they were engaged in carrying shells from railhead to battery. In August they transported French shock troops to the front along the Oise and Somme, while in October when the French were engaged in their attack upon the Plateau of Tahure, each five-ton Pierce Arrow truck carried a seven-ton tank through the mud and shell holes to the plateau to be used by the French forces in further attacks. Thereafter the work of the Réserve settled into the monotonous and routine conveying of supplies to the French forces in their more peaceful occupation after the armistice.

Nine enlisted in various sections of the French Army. All of the remainder, except seven, took service in the American Army or Navy. Of these seven one was rejected, one entered the American Red Cross, one returned to Dartmouth in the S. A. T. C., one was beyond the age of enlistment, while no information is available concerning the other three.

It is worthy of note that sixty Dartmouth members of the Field Service received commissions in the American or French Armies. This is a little more than fifty per cent, and shows both the high quality of the men and the value of the experience they had had during their months at the front. It is also remarkable that aviation in the Army and Navy, the most spectacular and dangerous of all forms of service, claimed twenty-five who received commissions.

Another evidence of the unusual qualities of these men is the fact that several of them received the Croix de Guerre for personal heroism or exceptional service. The men so honored were: C. M. Ashton, Jr. '20, George Dock, Jr. '16, Archie B. Gile '17, Ernest A. Giroux '19, Richard N. Hall '15, Stanley Hill '18 (also Médaille Militaire), C. W. Isbell '18, J. R. Milne '20,

Howard B. Lines '12, Paul G. Osborn '17 and R. H. Potter Jr. '19. Where all were men of unusual merit those who attain to command should be exceptionally honored. Dartmouth had eleven of these: Attending Physician, E. H. Lines '82; Chiefs of Sections, F. J. Dusossoit '18, A. B. Gile '17, C. R. Hood '18, H. P. Kennedy '18, A. T. Miles '16, F. O. Robinson '11, W. C. Sisson '17; Sub-Chiefs, W. D. Carr '17, L. P. Hall Jr. '11, and E. M. Noyes '16.

HANOVER AND THE COLLEGE IN WAR TIME

THESE facts, impressions and states of mind were set down that those who were interested, at a distance in place or time, might gain some knowledge of the war's effect upon an institution so vivid and sensitive as a great college. Information from other sources blocks out the true perspective.

Looking backward, we can see how natural the course of events in our nation and our College has been. There have been the anaesthesia of neutrality, restlessness, moral awakening, the call of duty, and finally irresistible ardor.

The young men looked for guidance to the authorities of the College, who in their turn looked in vain to Congress or the War Department for modern methods, not of the 19th century nor of the Spanish War but of the swiftly producing minute. Thus in this and many other colleges, from lack of knowledge and resources, the best course was not taken and the students willing to be led felt the hesitation and uncertainty and waited, assuming more than their real indifference, with an occasional outburst of impatient criticism.

In the spring of 1915, we contributed our cash, handsomely as we thought, to the field ambulances in France. A little group of pioneers, not wholly appreciated at the time, went to the American Ambulance service in the early summer. In the latter part of the college year 1915-1916 a home-drilled battalion had done all that could be expected without definite purpose and end in view and had fallen to pieces in a most natural way. The faculty had encouraged attendance at Plattsburg in the summer of 1916, and had given credit therefor.

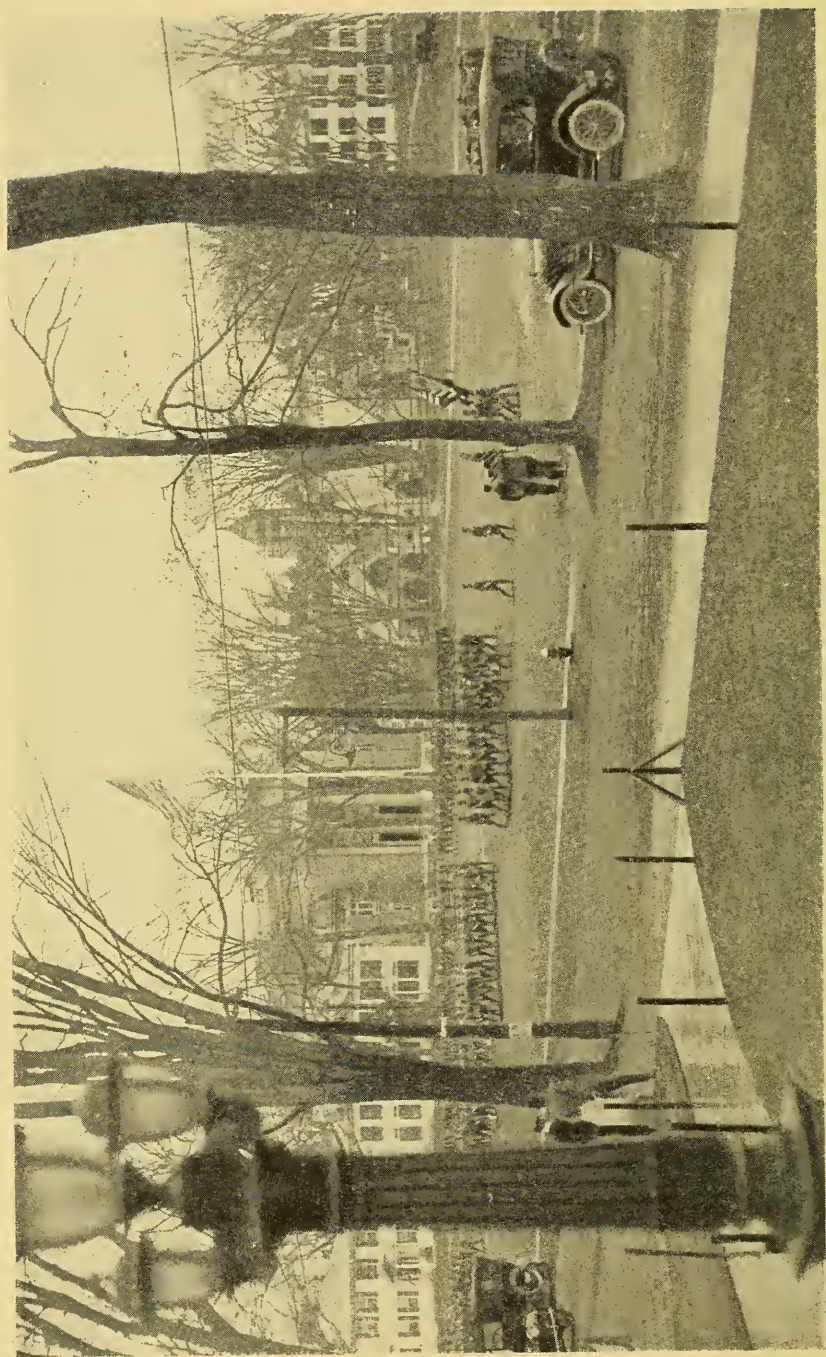

Then came a pause, not of indifference, but of the deepest solicitude in view of the increasing gravity of the situation and of the signs of earnestness showing through the usual airy carelessness of the undergraduates.

What could the College do?

As the situation grew acute in the early months of 1917, the President of the College asked this question of a committee of college officers and undergraduates of influence and discretion. A survey of all the possibilities of the time seemed to point, by exclusion, to a method newly marked out by the War Department in General Orders No. 48, consisting essentially of three hours a week of drill under an approved officer, with only the obligation of persistence to the end of the year. Enrollment was made rather slowly, just before the Easter recess, because detailed regulations could not be given in advance and because of the desire for greater activity.

Soon it appeared that the War Department was in no condition to furnish an officer.

At this time, in the last few days before the recess, an immediate call came for volunteers in the Naval Reserves for coast defense, and to this, with its promise of instant service, many responded. So came the recess to a college, quiet, not greatly excited, but inspired to say, "I must do something; what can I do best?"

On April 6th, in the middle of the Easter recess, the President of the United States signed the Resolution of Congress declaring a state of war to exist.

As the College re-assembled, it was plain that the period of doubt and questioning of the great issues was over. Action was in all minds. A few not knowing what to do left college, but wisely were sent back to wait for the best disposition of their abilities, and after a little settled down with the majority of the College to improve the time and bide the opportunity.

Others found their work and went to it.

So the College settled to a certain attitude of steadfast readiness. Outgoing trains daily bore away personal baggage, and one member of the College after another announced that he was going to his definite appointment; but there was no demoralization. Men were thoughtful and surprisingly steady.

The faculty released men to the service from April 14th, with full credit, and granted to students in residence substantial reduction in college work to enable all to engage in the 12-hours-a-week of drill.

Men of the College were soon in the Naval Reserves, the National Guard, the Red Cross and American Ambulance Services in France, the Military Stores School, the Coast Guard, the Reserve Officers' Training Camps, Military Census and State Surveys, Organized Agriculture, Signal Service and Wireless Telegraphy, Aviation, and Y. M. C. A. work. Some, like the medical students, realized that the best possible use they could make of their time was in the completion of the professional study of the year.

Going back a little—during the recess it appeared after exhaustive attempts of President Hopkins to secure an officer from the regular army that the War Department had none to assign. An officer of experience and efficiency was, however, obtained from the Massachusetts National Guard and the whole plan of drill changed to real work of 12 hours or more a week; and a new enrollment included practically every student in residence for whom it was possible. The number at its highest stood at about 1100, but was diminished somewhat as men were called away to full service elsewhere.

Daily from 3 to 5 every man in College not prevented by other duties joined in serious drill, and the regiment quickly made a most respectable appearance, and was prepared for the officer invalided from the splendid Canadian force in France, who appeared among us ready to teach some of the arts of modern warfare practiced at the battle front.

If we had taken the pulse of Hanover at the time we should have found it calm and steady. Its color was a little flushed in a healthy way as the countless flags waved from stores, dwellings and fraternity houses. The great tidal wave that on selected days sweeps from the Oval—motor cars, hasty workers, green caps, unhurried but decided food-seekers, leisurely dames and their escorts—was missing because all extra-mural competitions were canceled, partly from a sense of fitness and partly from necessity caused by departures and the lapsing of rivals. It was somewhat replaced by the khaki hosts that flowed and ebbed at 3 and 5. The College proceeded in comfort and peace without organized musical and dramatic clubs, though a laudable band might be discovered by listening. And by wise yielding to the inevitable, the Junior Prom was given up. Its genial hospitality would have felt keenly the absences, and however subdued its plan might have been, the presence of the sisters and cousins and those neither sisters nor cousins meant entertainment. By causes about which I offer no philosophy the fraternities were disproportionately bereft of their members. From the few neighborhood inquiries it appeared that 83%, 66%, 66%, 59% of the active membership of those answering went early to serve the country in some of the ways already mentioned.

The College did not at all suffer from lack of exercise; but to keep the baseball hand in, games were played between the different companies of the regiment, and eleven men were detached from each of two companies daily and bade go to it.

Outside of student life there was a marked tendency to usefulness. A company from the faculty and village—a home guard—drilled evenings. And in the highly organized State no less than eleven of the faculty were on the Committee of Public Safety and its sub-committees, several in high degree assiduous and useful. Three were on committees of the National Security League. One was appointed Historian of New Hampshire's Part in the War. Public-spirited citizens outside the College were doing their part. The spirit of intensive agriculture pervaded the place. Two blades of grass had little chance to grow where only one grew before, but the newly ploughed acres where never grew a potato or a bean gave hope of food sorely needed if the prices were evidence of need.

Indeed from the anxiety "to do something," from the eager and not-to-be-checked overlapping of organizations, of societies, of national, state and local committees, odd questions of efficiency arose. Suppose that all the organizations that caused Professor X to set down upon a card what he was willing or thought himself competent to do had called upon him for those services? It was one of the problems of early organization which gradually settled itself and certainly not by the way of loss of services.

The work of the women was highly organized, large, persistent and valuable. From the beginning of the war in Europe a branch of the Canadian Red Cross was most industrious and productive, seconded, only a little later, by the French Emergency Fund. The Soldiers' Comforts Club came into activity in the winter of 1917. And when need threatened our own forces the American Red Cross prepared to meet it with the same energy, in rooms hospitably furnished by the Young Men's Club. And into the organization of the State was brought a capable local Food Committee primarily concerned with methods of conservation.

The intimacy and closeness of it all was deeply impressive, the individual threads ran so directly from the home to the camp. It was to be expected in a college, at a time like this, that interesting young men known for months or even years, should speak of their plans and go, or perhaps, none the less missed, disappear quietly from sight. One did not wonder that scores of parents telegraphed or wrote or came to discover the meaning and the soundness of decisions suddenly disclosed by sons who for the first time had formed independent purposes.

But it was difficult to realize that boys known in neighboring homes from birth had scattered,—to France, to the Army, to the many varied purposes of a country at war; that a neighbor and colleague ordered to be in instant readiness was suddenly called to duty; that a son was commissioned and waiting for orders; that five nephews, according to their qualifications were already in service; that a well-trained niece was across the water with a corps of Red Cross nurses; but these are conditions that with slight variations repeated themselves with us all and gave a nearness and a reality to a status which the mind was very slow to accept as genuine.

Great opportunities came to ours, but one shrank from the revelations of the coming months or years, even though the major part of the soul might be fixed in the courage and determination that the cause demanded.

In the fall of 1918 this College in common with hundreds of others was taken over by the War Department; military officers were placed in command and had actual charge of the students at all times except during recitations, and had charge of discipline at all times.

The Students' Army Training Corps was established.

Although the details are very fresh in present memories I will note broad outlines. The College became a military post under officers of the United States Army, with mess and barrack conditions, with a schedule of duties from First Call to Taps, with Kitchen Police and Guard Duty, and ample penalties for any little misunderstanding of the compelling nature of the orders. Part of the military duties were educational, and involved regular and proper performance at exercises conducted by persons not themselves under the direct military authority,—the faculty, or such of them as were not absent upon other government service. To a large extent the matter which they were to inculcate was determined for them by the War Department's Committee on Education. All the usual classification was abolished, and the grouping was by age only,—20 to 21, 19 to 20, 18 to 19, and those under 18 were allowed to enroll if they wished. Four quarters were planned for the year; and as it was the expectation that the oldest group would be called to camp at the end of the first quarter their studies were substantially prescribed; the second group, with more liberty, had two quarters in which to cover the required work, and therefore some option in other studies; and so on. The courses recommended were simple and "practical," that is they tended to make serviceable men. Two unusual composite courses were laid out and given with large measure of success, "Sanitation and Hygiene," and "War Issues." Military Law was another course outside of the usual college curriculum. A special feature was an intensive course in Chemistry designed for two years and spoken of as the "Chemical Warfare Course." Students in this course (except beginners) and in Medicine and Engineering were released from part of the drill and allowed to give their whole time to their professional work. This was a novelty in chemical instruction here, and, especially in the case of students who had been qualified for advanced work, gave admirable results. There were supervised study hours in Chandler and Tuck Halls, and plenty of military drill.

From many colleges have come mutterings—more than mutterings, growlings and moanings of discontent; and also, it is said, from the War Department. The electric atmosphere of war soured the academic milk. The coarse and arbitrary men of blood failed altogether to appreciate the essential delicate poise when philosophy is at the helm. How can teachers teach if their pupils (otherwise absolutely regular, by the way) are held out of the class for K. P.! On the other hand, "Inter arma silent leges." When a big fight is on, there isn't much use in talking about the way we generally do it.

The First Day in the Trenches.

What is the use of letting this talk stuff stand in the way of making officers when hurry is the word? So said some and made their actions correspond.

Undoubtedly there were all degrees of success in carrying out the short experiment.

If one recorder were able to gather up, and chose to set forth in a carping manner, all the administrative errors for which no one at the College was responsible, it would make an instructive history of illusory information, conflicting commands, missing supplies, and general muddling. The influenza, at its worst just before the initiation of the S. A. T. C., was partly due to lack of foresight, but chiefly to conditions inseparable from crowding men together.

But we claim, and can challenge anyone to disprove it, that nowhere was success greater than in Dartmouth College, and the reasons are creditable to all concerned. If the same conditions prevailed elsewhere no doubt the success was as great. First of all the administration made no panic-stricken grab for members to be maintained at the Government expense, and lowered its standard of admission not a bit. Then the students accepted the military discipline cheerfully if not lovingly. If men whom they knew so well could endure the hardships and dangers of the battle front, they surely could stand the inconvenient novelties at home which were making them ready to swell or to replace the hundreds already in active service. The faculty appointed a Committee on Military Relations and turned the whole management over to them in hearty and patriotic cooperation with the purposes of the Government. While from time to time there was very proper inquiry, and enough protest to remedy troubles that only awaited attention for relief, the whole spirit was of unswerving loyalty. Doubtless some found it a queer and lonely world in its ultra-modernity, but they bore up bravely in faith that the Golden Age would return. But while the students and faculty did well their parts, a predominating factor was the reasonable and considerate attitude of the commanding officer, Major Patterson, and his aid, Lieutenant Pickett. There were, of course, small misunderstandings and mild frictions inevitable in the organization of an unprecedented system involving some 800 men with whose names and scholastic duties it was necessary for the officers to become familiar, and who in many cases were as jocular with military discipline as a pup with a ball of yarn. But the frictions were never intentional, and wherever possible were promptly and courteously remedied as soon as attention was called to them. When the full difficulty of the task is appreciated, both officers and students of the College will acknowledge a debt of gratitude to the army officers for performing their duties in so careful and kindly a manner.

Considered with reference to a future very uncertain at the time, this was a hard but necessary device to carry on a prolonged war. The smoothly flowing current of a great college was wholly turned into new channels in order to deliver power at the utmost speed. It had the advantage of being set in a quiet and undemonstrative New England village whose men and women were fixed in a determination as cold and hard as their granite. Not a personal call was unheeded. Not a sacrifice of habit or comfort was grudged. Not a call for funds came that was not over-subscribed. And the student body, with earnestness and unquenchable humor, fitted well with the setting and relieved its tendency to grimness more than a little.

But as we may look at it now, it was an episode and not a revolution: too brief to make permanent changes, almost too brief to justify inferences. We are back in the old ways without visible profit from the military decomposition of academic customs and precedents. It might have been well to throw the whole bunch of tricks into the scrap heap even if we went to it and picked out the good ones for a new collection. If not joyful, it was surprising to discover what the military power of the United State could bring about. Actually it got every man out of bed at 6.15 in the morning and put him back at 10.15 at night. It emptied every fraternity house not only of its lodgers but of its social loungers; it ran a college without a "required" cut or any other kind of cut. They were all there or accounted for every time. In a village where it is necessary to maintain unsightly wire fences to prevent the destruction of beautiful greensward, and where the College sends out a corps of lancers as chiffoniers to spike and gather the scraps into baskets, the spectacle of a hundred men in uniform gathering with their fingers every cigarette butt and bit of paper visible to the naked eye was wholesome and edifying. There are superficial objections to continuing this practice in times of peace, but are there fundamental ones? Would not parents and guardians give their approval? The supervised study hall was unpopular for several sound reasons, but even here a rude and uncultivated form of fun was introduced by the extravagant custom of snapping pennies at the non-commissioned officers in charge, who evidently had not learned that in the back of the room is the pedagogue's strategic position of vantage. Wanderers on the street at hours when their schedule showed that they should have been somewhere under cover were picked up or reported by the P. G. or M. P. or whatever part of the alphabet it was, to the joy of all their peers. And only with glee were the stories circulated of how A. B. was saucy to the face of his non-com with an emergency word and was promptly marched to what stood for a guardhouse, and how C. D., mistaking a potato for a projectile practiced with it a ballistic curve in the dining room, with the sequel of peeling similar tubers all the following day. And there were no sea lawyers to make much headway against the frightful injustice of extra drill or curtailed liberty for a whole company when some culprit in it could not be discovered. Yes, it was funny.

But how fast they learned their military duties, and what a fine appearance they made towards the last in review or at retreat! Though it must be confessed that the firm belief that within a year many of them would be dead and many more crippled choked one up a bit, so I am told. Will the influence of that fine ceremony of honor to the flag that symbolizes so much that makes life worth living continue to the end of their lives, I wonder. Unquestionably the civilian spectators who ignored their own obligations of respect received very useful lessons.

There will be much difference of opinion as to the result of this undertaking, which can only be regarded as an incomplete experiment. It has shown that under stress the organization of the College—this College—can be rapidly and completely put at the disposal of the Government, and that military regulations are not incompatible with a fair scholastic return; for from the scholarly point of view the work of that fall was far from a failure. In some cases it was better than usual. It has shown that the faculty can quickly plan new and in a sense alien courses, adapt existing ones, and turn their own teaching skill and experience into ways previously untried. It has shown that students, happily never long oppressed with unnatural seriousness, can enter into the spirit of a great enterprise and endure with only superficial grumbling conditions very irksome in comparison with their previous experiences. It has not, however, established new habits and customs, and it is at least doubtful what permanent impression it has left. It is certain that after the declaration of the armistice on November 11 the interest in military affairs rapidly and perceptibly flagged.

The experiment does not give basis for permanent military training in the College, unless it should be part of a scheme of universal training in which the college man would receive credit for work well done in the college, or be sent to a training camp. Military drill, non-farcical, rigid, exact, would be a most admirable element in college life, provided, that all military control could stop with the drill. The fact is, as demonstrated in many colleges in previous times of peace, that military training worth anything, with its stern requirements and definite penalties, is quite incompatible with the present easy going ways of the college. And whether it would be better to check initiative and student "activities," reduce social life, insist on a well-ordered daily schedule, a democratic equality of living conditions, and unquestioning obedience in all things is another large question.

We may now be very thankful that the Students' Army Training Corps existed as it did, and that it and its necessity have, for the present, ceased.

ACADEMIC ADJUSTMENTS

THE period during which academic adjustments were necessary began with April, 1917, and closed in November, 1918, after the armistice had been signed. This period is divided into two distinct parts: the first from April, 1917, to June, 1918, and the second, June, 1918 until the armistice. The latter period covers the arrangements for and administration of what was known as the Students' Army Training Corps, commonly known as the S. A. T. C.

APRIL, 1917 TO JUNE, 1918

The College had opened in September, 1916 with a registration of 1500 and this number had been practically maintained until April when the United States entered the war. In a few weeks after war was declared, almost fifty per cent of the students had left the College to enter the various services including the army, navy, aviation, and ambulance service. The question immediately arose as to what, if any, academic credit should be granted for men leaving during the spring of 1917, and it was finally decided that credit for the full semester should be given, with the grades reported at the mid-semester, for all men leaving college to enter the service. If such credit should prove to be sufficient to fulfill the requirement for the degree, the Trustees voted that degrees should be granted at Commencement in June, 1917. In addition to absence for distinctly military service, special arrangements were made so that men leaving for work on farms in order to help in the increased production of agricultural products should be given credit for the semester in the same way that those leaving for military service were granted credit.

Early in the second semester of the year 1916-17 the College had arranged for military training, and a Canadian officer, temporarily disabled for active service, was engaged to take general charge of this department. Each student was given the privilege of taking military drill, giving up one three-hour course and receiving credit of three hours for the work in military training. This general regime was continued through the spring of 1917 until the commencement season.

In September, 1917 the College opened with 960 students, and the military drill was continued with the same general arrangements as had been in force during the preceding semester. All through the year 1917-18, students were withdrawing from college to enter the service, so that before the end of the year the number of students enrolled was very much reduced. The faculty voted in the second semester that the regular routine should proceed without holidays or recesses in order that the college year might close early, thus giving opportunity to students to enter into other lines of activity that seemed necessary and desirable. The year therefore closed on May 24th, about three weeks in advance of the usual date.

On March 30th, 1918 the trustees had voted:

"That members of the Class of 1918 who could have graduated with their class and who went from college into the military service of the country be given with their class the degrees which they would severally have received on the regular completion of their courses. This action is entirely without prejudice to any future action of the Trustees."

Pursuant to the above vote, many men from the various branches of the service returned for their degrees at commencement time and in the place of academic costume wore the regular uniform of the service that they represented.

JUNE, 1918 TO NOVEMBER, 1918

In July, 1918 the College was informed by government officials at Washington that a camp exclusively for college men was to be established at Plattsburg, New York, and that Dartmouth was requested to furnish a quota for this camp with the purpose of fitting men to return to the College, probably as second lieutenants, to aid in the military training of the members of the S. A. T. C. The quota called for, at first, was forty but was changed several times until finally Dartmouth was asked to send one hundred undergraduates and ten members of the faculty to the camp. The quota was filled duly and Dartmouth was fully represented, most of the men being granted commissions at the close of the training period. The Government, however, changed the orders with regard to the men and decided that no undergraduate should return to his own institution but that he should be sent to some other college to assist in the military training. Dartmouth, therefore, lost the one hundred men chosen for this service, and it was further decided that the members of the faculty could not be allowed to assist the military officers, so that the training which the members of the faculty had undergone, in the main, went for naught.

In September, 1918 the College opened at the regular date with 800 students and it is to be noted that Dartmouth did not admit men at this time who were not regularly and properly fitted to enter under normal conditions. In fact, the College continued until October 1st under the regular regime, on which date the S. A. T. C. was organized and the United States Government had full control until the signing of the armistice.

S. A. T. C.

At noon on October 1st, the members of the College, except those under military age, were gathered in military formation on the Campus and took the oath of allegiance, thereby becoming regular members of the Army of the United States and placing themselves under military regime in connection with all their activities. On that date the College became in appearance and in fact a military camp. The regular officers of the College were working with the military officers in charge, and in passing it is well to note that the relations of collegiate officers and military officers were at all times entirely coöperative and congenial.

In establishing an organization for this period, special arrangements had to be made in connection with the following matters:

1. Military Training,
2. Housing,
3. Boarding,
4. Financial Arrangements,
5. Curriculum Changes.

1. MILITARY TRAINING.

The military training was carried out in detail as in a regular camp with reveille, retreat, roll call, taps, regular drill, and the usual methods of discipline used in connection with training camps. The students wore the regular army khaki and had to obey strictly all the orders issued by the military officers. There were individual and isolated cases of unwillingness and breaches of discipline but in the main the members of the College entered enthusiastically into the scheme, and in a few weeks' time the company made a very creditable appearance in its evolutions.

2. HOUSING.

The Government took over the college dormitories and administered them as barracks during this period, and the undergraduates learned how to make up their own beds the first thing in the morning, to place any spare shoes with toes pointing northeast, hang neckties exactly in the place where they belonged, and, in general, keep their quarters shipshape; failing in this, they were given the favor of acting as kitchen police or something equally pleasant.

3. BOARDING.

Rations were furnished in the College Commons, each student being provided with a regular mess-kit and learning in the daily routine to be thankful for food and accommodations which at other times would seem absolutely impossible.

4. FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Each member of the College (except those under military age) was a regularly enrolled member of the army, receiving a private's pay, rations, and housing accommodations and, in addition, the Government met all financial charges of the College for tuition and instruction. When the armistice had been signed and the Government decided to discontinue the S. A. T. C.

organization, a reasonably satisfactory and prompt settlement was made with regard to all charges presented by the College to the Government.

5. CURRICULUM CHANGES.

It was suggested by Washington authorities that in all institutions in which the S. A. T. C. was to be established the collegiate year should be divided into three terms, rather than into two semesters, in order that wholesale changes in personnel might be made at the end of a twelve-week period if such changes should be found necessary. In line with this suggestion, Dartmouth therefore arranged for the year to be divided into three terms and carried the arrangement through to the end of the year even after the S. A. T. C. had been discontinued.

There were very few special courses introduced into the curriculum, because it was felt that the courses in Mathematics, English, Foreign Languages, and Sciences would be entirely advantageous in general preparation for intelligent service. There was, however, one new course introduced and prescribed for all men. This course was known as the War Aims Course. In introducing the course the Government aimed to bring before every man who was a member of the S. A. T. C. a reasonably intelligent and broad-minded appreciation of the historical causes that led up to the war and also specifically the basis on which the United States felt compelled to enter the conflict. At Dartmouth the course was carried on by a combination of professors taken from the social science group and was considered a very thorough and successful course.

From October 1 until after the armistice was signed, the College proceeded under the above described organization with no break except such interruption as was made necessary by a very serious epidemic of influenza which proved fatal in a number of cases. The number of men who were ill at various times hindered very much the unified effort that was being put forward but the medical authorities finally got the matter well in hand, and, before the armistice, the College living as a military camp was in a reasonably healthy condition.

After the armistice had been signed and the College was called upon again to readjust itself to the former academic situation, the only serious matter left for consideration was the question of granting academic credit for men who had been in service who had not received their degrees and who were to return to college to complete their requirements. The trustees discussed the matter at length and took a very liberal and broadminded attitude in legalizing a procedure which was carried out by a committee of the faculty to the great advantage of men who had been in the service. Without giving in detail the rules laid down by the trustees, it might be sufficient to state that no credit was allowed unless a student had been in service at least three months. If he had been in service three months and not more than nine months, he was allowed one half year's credit of fifteen semester hours; and if he had been in service more than nine months, he was granted a full year's credit of thirty semester hours. There were, of course, individual cases in which the general rules laid down imposed something of a hardship but in the main they worked out with substantial justice to all concerned.

In closing this sketch of the academic adjustments necessary during the war period it would be entirely unfair to omit the statement that during the troublous times through which the College had of necessity to pass, there was on the part of the faculty and the officers of administration a spirit of hearty co-operation which helped to make what otherwise might have been a dreary and toilsome task a most satisfactory and successful experience.

THE MILITARY STORES SCHOOL

BEFORE the declaration of war in 1917, a group of business men had anticipated the critical need for meeting, in the threatened emergency, the problems of handling and storing vast quantities of war materials likely soon to be in process of accumulation. No sooner had war been declared than the Council of National Defence appointed from this group a Storage Committee. The principal function of this Committee was to initiate and co-operate in measures for the development of a storage organization adequate to the needs of the impending situation.

On April 29, a telegram from Mr. Morris Llewellyn Cooke of Philadelphia, Chairman of the Storage Committee, urged the Tuck School to organize a training course for supplying the army with contingents of men trained in the practices of industrial storage. Immediate reply was made that the staff and facilities of the School were at the disposal of the War Department and that a training course would open on May 7. Within the following week, courses were planned, the instruction staff organized, and more than a hundred men selected for enrollment. On the day appointed, the first session of the Military Stores School was under way. Such was the origin of one of the many contributions of the College to the common cause.

During the ensuing twelve months, a series of six sessions, each of six weeks duration, was conducted in close co-operation with the War Department. In the beginning, both the Ordnance and Quartermaster Departments gave active support to the project and designated officers to assist in the work of the Tuck School and other institutions where the training courses were established. After three sessions had been completed, however, it became apparent that the difficulties of adjusting the course to other training projects of the Quartermaster Corps were insuperable. From then on, the course was conducted solely for the purpose of supplying men for the Ordnance Department, whose requests for men and their training became increasingly urgent.

Two principal requirements had, at the outset, been specified: good men and thorough training. To meet the first requirement, the privilege of enrollment was extended only to men who gave evidence of positive qualifications, either through previous training or experience, for the service for which they volunteered. The plan of training, more fully described below, was evolved in part from the regular curriculum of the Tuck School and in part from other sources, mainly the War Department.

In the enrollments for all six sessions, preference was given to graduates of schools of business administration, properly accredited college graduates and non-college men of mature age and experience. A few exceptions were made in favor of undergraduates who gave evidence of fitness for the course.

No assurance was given that there would be opportunity to enter the service at grades above that of private, nor was advancement to higher grades promised. The only inducement offered was an opportunity to obtain preparation for immediate and vital war service.

With only the vaguest of information as to the nature of the training desired, and with no more than promises of future assistance from the War Department, it was at once apparent that the School must fall back on its own resources for the materials, methods and personnel of instruction. In its initial stages, therefore, the course was developed by drawing on the staff and regular courses of the Tuck School. Visits to army stations and recourse to available War Department manuals and military publications also yielded materials of instruction. Various other expedients were resorted to, with the aim of providing a training of immediately practical value.

Further experience, later supplemented by substantial aid and contributions from the Ordnance Department, made possible the development of a comprehensive training program which proved thoroughly profitable in its results. Courses in storeskeeping and property accountability were given major weight in the plan of instruction. Regular class work was supplemented by problems, field work, and inspection trips to industrial plants. Supplementary lectures were given by representatives of business concerns, notably the Western Electric Company and the Winchester Repeating Arms Company. Additional courses were offered in such subjects as army organization, army regulations, military law, and conversational French. Infantry drill regulations were studied, and the men were regularly drilled by officers in charge of military training in the College. At the close of each session, examinations were held, the work of each man was graded, and the final ratings transmitted to the War Department.

The changing military status of the men enrolled and the relations of the School to the War Department reflected the shifting stages by which the war establishment was evolved. At the close of the first two sessions, a regular army officer was assigned to examine the men for enlistment. Those rejected by reason of physical defects were offered civil service appointments in the War Department. Most of the latter group were subsequently enlisted and later commissioned. At the completion of the third and fourth sessions, the men were certified for enlistment at army posts or for induction by local boards, according to their status under the draft.

Before the fifth session was under way, the School was taken over by the Ordnance Department and given definite status as a military organization; thereafter to be conducted as "The Ordnance Training School at Dartmouth College." A lieutenant of the Ordnance Department was assigned from Watertown Arsenal to assume command of the unit, with two Ordnance sergeants as his assistants. The men who had been accepted for enrollment were inducted into active service by local boards under orders from the Adjutant General, and assigned on furlough direct to the School. For the sixth session, the men were inducted into service by local boards, routed through army posts to receive uniforms and equipment, and then ordered to Hanover where they were furloughed for the duration of the course.

A seventh session had been planned to begin early in May, 1918, and arrangements were made to receive a large contingent. At the last moment, however, word was received from Washington to the effect that the Ordnance Training Schools at educational institutions were to be discontinued, and that orders had been issued diverting the men to Camp Hancock, Ga., which had been designated as the central training camp for ordnance personnel. The officer in charge and his assistants received instructions to close the records, transfer the property and report for duty elsewhere. This was the end of a unique example of the manner in which the unwarlike resources of the College may be converted to serve the exigencies of war.

In the course of the six sessions, nearly five hundred men had completed the course and entered various branches of service. More than fifty colleges, universities and technical schools were represented in the enrollment, graduates of Dartmouth predominating. A large number, approximately 350, saw service in the Ordnance Department. Of those who completed the first three sessions, fifty men entered the Quartermaster Corps. Opportunities for service in the line through officers' training camps attracted a considerable number. A scattering remainder were absorbed by other branches of the Army and Navy.

Available records show that the men who graduated from the course earned rapid advancement and that probably a majority received commissions. Many saw service overseas, and if space permitted, an interesting story might be told of the excellent account which they gave of themselves under critical conditions calling for ready initiative and intelligent resourcefulness. It fell to the lot of many to do their bits in ways less conspicuous but none the less creditable. Some had part in working out improved storage methods and in evolving standard practices for the supply service. Others made records as instructors in training organizations. The names of several have place on the Dartmouth Honor Roll.

The value of the whole undertaking, from the point of view of the War Department, is reflected in the following quotation from a letter of the Ordnance officer who directed the work of the several schools from Washington:

"The Amos Tuck School may well be proud of the work which it has done during the past year in the training of men for the Ordnance service. The Dartmouth contingents have made good wherever they have been assigned. This, as I see it, has been due to two factors. First,—Dartmouth has been able to secure an exceptionally high grade of men and has not for a moment let down on the requirements for admission to the training schools. Secondly,—the instruction at Dartmouth has been of an exceptionally high caliber."

The training course was officially terminated by a gracious letter from the Chief of Ordnance, quoted in part as follows:

"The best interests of the Ordnance Service have seemed to demand the centralization of all instruction in Ordnance Training Camp, Camp Hancock, Georgia. This centralization of instruction has necessitated the abandonment of the Ordnance Training School at Dartmouth College.

"In closing the work at Dartmouth College, this office wishes to express sincere thanks for the co-operation which Dartmouth College has given to the Ordnance Department in the training of soldiers for its supply service.

"Without the co-operation of Dartmouth College and the other colleges which have given their facilities as well as time and expert knowledge of their instructors, this Department would, up to this time, have been unable to properly train its personnel in the important function of supply in the field."

THE DARTMOUTH COLLEGE TRAINING DETACHMENT

On May 15, 1918, an inquiry was received from the United States War Department as to whether Dartmouth College would undertake the training in vocational work of enlisted men in groups for two months each. After consultation on May 17 with a representative of the Committee on Education and Special Training it was decided that such training was a service the College should render the Government in its war endeavors and an affirmative reply was made. Members of the Committee visited Hanover on May 22 and contracted to have the training start on June 15. Having decided to render the service, it was next necessary to determine along what lines training could be given and how it was to be accomplished. The obvious course seemed to be to have the work conducted under the direction of the Thayer School of Civil Engineering, which was accordingly done. A canvass of the facilities of the College made it apparent that the courses which should be given were:—The principles of radio work with practice in buzzer and signal work; carpentry; automobile driving, with the field repair and maintenance of the car; telephone installation and operation. It is interesting to note that, while this latter work was considered by those consulted to be of the least importance, in the end it turned out to fill a very vital governmental need.

It was agreed to take two detachments of 260 men each for periods of two months' training. In the middle of September word was received from Washington—"that there is an urgent need for more telephone electricians. We must at the earliest possible moment double our training facilities for these men, and it is our feeling that Dartmouth is one of the best qualified institutions which we know of, to handle this work." The request was made that—"some scheme be devised, by means of which you can make use of your facilities to the very limit." Accordingly it was decided that commencing October 15 the telephone course should be expanded to a course of thirteen weeks; that the numbers in the course should be increased to 450 men, and arranged so that 150 men would be released each month. This would have brought the total enrollment of the detachment to about 900 men, distributed to courses as follows:—telephone 450, motors 200, radio 100, carpenters 50, assistant instructors and assistants 100. Due to the influenza epidemic and later the armistice the total enrollment was not reached, but the facilities had been provided, both in the physical plant and in the teaching staff. The college instructors engaged in the work were supplemented by men from active practice in the various courses which were being taught so that the staff in each course included men with theoretical training, teaching experience and commercial experience. For the enlarged detachment there would have been over 30 instructors (including a Signal Corps Officer) and 60 enlisted men retained from the first two detachments as assistant instructors. The business, housing and mess aspects of the detachments were conducted by the Business Director, Treasurer, Superintendent of Buildings, and Manager of the Dartmouth Dining Association.

The military officers reported to the Supervisor of Military Training on June 10, and the first detachment was received on Saturday, June 15, 1918, started its educational training on Monday, June 17, and was transferred to various camps on August 12. The second detachment was received on August 15, started its educational work on August 16 and was transferred on October 13. A portion of the third detachment was received on October 15 and the instruction closed on December 12.

During the first detachment many photographs were taken of the men while at work and lantern slides were made from the most characteristic. The exercises of each detachment thereafter were preceded by an illustrated lecture showing the work of the previous detachments, in order that the members of the new detachment might appreciate what they had undertaken, that an esprit de corps might be developed and an incentive furnished to do better work than had been done by the previous detachment. The fact that photographs were being taken of their work and that slides of some of them were to be shown to succeeding detachments proved a stimulus to good work.

The schedule for the day started at 5.45 a. m. and ended with taps at 10.00 p. m. Classes in vocational work were held from 8.40 a. m. until 12.00 noon and from 1.20 p. m. to 4.40 p. m. Military drill was held for one hour in the morning and another hour in the afternoon. During the existence of the training detachment the first two detachments were trained and a portion of the third detachment, the latter being listed as Group B of the Students' Army Training Corps. Of the 628 men trained, 136 were in radio; 93 in carpentry; 242 in motors and 157 in telephone. The men were transferred to different camps in the following numbers: Fort Warren, Mass., 124; Camp Johnston, Fla., 75; Camp Devens, Mass., 54; Camp Jackson, S. C., 45; Signal Camp Corps, Camp Meade, Md., 37; Camp Alfred Vail, N. J., 37; Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, Pa., 22; College Park, Md., 11; Yale University, New Haven, Conn., 10; College of the City of New York, 7; University of Vermont, 6; Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., 4; Camp Taylor, Ky., 4; Camp Merritt, 2; Boston University, Mass., 1; Harvard College, 1; Camp Lee, Va., 1.

The radio course, given in the Thayer School Building, considered the fundamental theories of electricity through lectures, laboratory work, and computation exercises; practice in code and semaphore work for sending and receiving messages; and the theory and use of wireless apparatus.

The carpentry course utilized the college carpenter shop where an exhibition was given of the use and care of tools; the construction of simple objects, and the parts of a building, with the method of laying them out through the construction of building models. Field construction included the re-erection of a large barn, replacing the frame work of a barn which had been dismantled and completing the construction of a barn from new material, the construction of an open shed at the college storehouse, and the concrete work involved in the foundation for each case; replacing the wooden floor in Ledyard Bridge across the Connecticut River; shingling several buildings in Hanover; constructing tables, closets and various apparatus for use in the different courses and in the mess hall.

The Motor Course was conducted in the basement of the gymnasium where automobiles were taken down, their various parts examined, repaired, adjusted, and the cars reassembled. A few parts were purchased for construction work but in the main work was done on local cars. The Government furnished two motor trucks in the early part of the course and later added three more. Driving experience was obtained on the highways in the vicinity of Hanover and in doing such trucking as the work of the detachment required.

The Training Detachment at Work on Ledyard Bridge.

The Telephone Department at the begining was housed in Wilder Hall, utilizing most of the Physics Department facilities, and also a large amount of equipment which was loaned by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. For the enlarged telephone work the entire top and bottom floors of Butterfield Hall were used and the whole of the Gable House, so called, just northwest of Butterfield Hall.

The work in the course was divided into three parts,—for linemen, cable-splicers, repair and troublemen. The linemen erected a pole line in College Park, strung a cable upon the poles, bonded and grounded the cable to protect from lightening, cut in cable boxes, took out loops for subscribers stations and laid underground cable in multiple with the central office cable, and connected into the central office both with open wires and loops. In each case troubles were detected, traced and cleared; the Peoples Telephone line which had fallen into disrepair was rebuilt; local commercial repair work was done in cooperation with the New England Telephone employes. The cable-splicers spliced 15 to 180 pair cable, spliced and wiped lead sleeves and tested and selected multiples for the different terminals. The repair and troublemen took apart and reassembled instruments and connected them by local lines through main and intermediate frames to a central office and switchboard. They had practice in operating switchboards and clearing troubles; and field experience in using a farm wire fence with exchanges located upon it.

In all the courses work was divided into selected proportions of recitation, laboratory and field work. One feature which proved of great value and enlisted the commendation of visitors was the course in elementary drawing which was given to the entire detachment. It was specified that the men should become capable of reading drawings and it was the opinion of those in charge that this could be accomplished best through the ability to construct a simple drawing. As a part of this course an exercise was given in making a small survey using only light plane table (made by the members of a carpentry class), pencil and scale; and with distances paced. This exercise demonstrated the fact that the majority of the men with the instructions given could make a very good reconnaissance map if occasion required. The drawing course was given in the top floor of Chandler Hall.

Adequate barracks for the first two detachments were afforded by the drill floor of the Alumni Gymnasium. For the enlarged detachment Reed, Thornton, Hallgarten, and the Fayerweather Row were to be used. Mess was served by the Dartmouth Dining Association in the great hall of the Commons. The Trophy room at the Alumni Gymnasium was used as a rest and recreation room and the Christian Association had a representative there. Music was especially encouraged. An orchestra of detachment men played at mess, noon and night.

The interest, enthusiasm, achievement, appreciation and deportment of the men were of a quality and quantity which exceeded the most sanguine expectations. They had the power to do much in the courses taught and they acquired an insight into their inherent possibilities, a knowledge of how to develop those possibilities, and in many cases a determination so to do. In two months they prepared themselves to assist mightily in helping win the war for humanity and civilization. The detachment courses were organized and administered, however, with the realization that the greatest service could be rendered after the war by assisting in permeating this country with high ideals and a vision of a civilization clean, safe, fair and stable. One of the detachment men wrote back to the Supervisor that he had "keen and most sincere appreciation of the many wonderful things that we were privileged to learn, and for all of the good times so generously accorded us by Hanover people, and those connected with the doings of the College and town at that time. We formed many acquaintances which will prove of life-long interest to us, and in years to come, I feel sure that each and every one of us will look back upon the time spent at Hanover as being a bright light which has cast its glow over many homes, and which will never fail to illuminate our trains of thought with most pleasant reminiscences in the long years to come."

The work of the detachment was successful through the hearty co-operation of all concerned in the enterprise. The fullest sympathy and support in the educational part of the work was given also by the military officers. The citizens of the town rendered valuable aid in many ways and the women especially were of much assistance, through socials, entertainments, and the work of the Red Cross during the severe influenza epidemic. Without their unceasing, tireless and effective efforts the deaths could not have been kept at the low number of ten.

The success accompanying the work of the training detachments is a source of lasting pleasure to all those who were connected with it.

THE FACULTY IN THE WAR

The period of the war was a peculiarly trying one to instructor as well as to student. Both felt the uneasiness that came with a desire to be active in the greatest physical struggle in the world's history and both felt the uncertainty as to when the call to go outweighed the responsibility of staying. The student saw his friends, fraternity brothers, dormitory neighbors and classroom associates disappearing one by one until mere skeletons of organizations remained. The experience was just as real for the instructor who saw his classes dwindling and realized to what these men were going. Sometimes there was a word in advance but more often they were merely missing some day.

In the first summer of the war and throughout the next year members of the faculty left Hanover in constantly increasing numbers to take up some form of war work. Many were in active service in the Infantry, Artillery, Ordnance, Air Service, Chemical Warfare, or Ambulance Service. Others were doing equally important work as civilians. It has been found necessary to include in the present volume the names of those only who were in actual military service or in one of the welfare organizations; but mention should at least be made of the type of work done by other men in civilian capacity.

Many were naturally called to Washington, where college administrators and professors seemed nearly as numerous as the military. Members of the Dartmouth staff were found here in a variety of capacities: associated with the Secretary of War in connection with industrial relations; experts with the U. S. Shipping Board and the National War Labor Board; officials of the Business Department of the Committee on Education and Special Training of the War Department; and associated with the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and the Committee on Public Information.

Others were doing equally important work in other countries: at the Versailles Peace Conference; with the Interallied Shipping Board in London and Paris; and with the Military Service Branch of the Department of Justice in Canada.

Still others were using their special knowledge to serve as ballistic experts, financial experts, or as readers of foreign language newspapers, or in planning the instructional work of the S. A. T. C., and it was natural that the directors of the Military Stores School and Vocational Training Detachment, both of which were using college facilities, should be recruited from the ranks of the faculty.

This list might well be further extended, for there was not a man who did not make some direct contribution of his time and labor whether in Hanover or across the ocean.

Amid all the confusion of diminishing classes and perturbed states of mind the routine of the college continued effectively and adapted itself to changing conditions. Courses were added as occasion demanded; sections were consolidated; the work of an instructor who might be leaving was assumed by another and the work went on. Even when the College became a military camp, the faculty was still able to maintain a high standard of academic work.

But any statement of the war service of the faculty would be far from complete without a sincere tribute to the men who stayed on the job. In a number of cases men were repeatedly called to take up some form of service for which they were especially fitted but remained in Hanover at the urgent request of the President, who felt their presence was essential to the College. Although working more indirectly, they performed just as important service in the war as many who put on the uniform, and at the same time they were the vital factor in preserving the continuous life of the College.

A tabulation of the war record of the members of the faculty and administrative officers on the Dartmouth rolls for the academic years 1917-1919, who were in actual military service or with the Red Cross or Y. M. C. A., follows:

DARTMOUTH WAR RECORD

Roll of Honor

GEORGE DUFEE DESHON

Colonel, Medical Corps.

Born Aug. 5, 1864, Brookline, Mass. After leaving Dartmouth, he entered West Point Military Academy, from which he graduated in 1886. While there he was a classmate of General Pershing. He became an officer in the Regular Army and was promoted through the various ranks from second lieutenant in 1886 to colonel in 1917. He held degrees from the Bellevue Hospital Medical School of New York and from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. He served in the Philippines, Hawaii and Panama. He was a close personal friend of General Edwards and when the latter was appointed to the command of the military forces in the Canal Zone, Colonel Deshon gave up his work in the Ancon Hospital there to devote all his energies to the duties of chief surgeon on General Edwards' staff.

When General Edwards was ordered north to assume his new duties in New England, after the United States had declared war against Germany, Colonel Deshon came with him and became chief surgeon on General Edwards' staff of the Department of the Northeast. General Pershing invited Colonel Deshon to join his staff with the American Expeditionary Forces, but he was obliged to decline on account of ill health. He died June 24, 1917, of heart failure at his home in Brookline, Mass., while still in service.

ANDREW REGINALD WENTWORTH

Captain, Naval Medical Corps, (retired).

Born Oct. 19, 1859. After graduating from the Dartmouth Medical School, he entered the Medical Corps of the United States Navy as an assistant surgeon, April 22, 1885, and was assigned to duty at the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, N. H. He was promoted at various times and on Dec. 29, 1912, attained the grade of medical director, with the rank of captain. He served on many warships and at numerous shore stations during his career.

While he was in command of the Naval Hospital at Bremerton, Wash., he suffered a stroke of apoplexy on March 31, 1918. He was retired from active service Feb. 7, 1919, because of physical disability contracted in line of duty and returned to his home in Kittery, Maine. He died of apoplexy April 13, 1921, at the Naval Hospital at Portsmouth, N. H.

JAMES BROWN GRISWOLD

First Lieutenant, Medical Corps.

Born Dec. 10, 1870. He studied medicine at Yale, Columbia and Dartmouth. After receiving his hospital training, he practiced medicine at Morristown, N. J. He served on the staffs of hospitals in Morristown and New York City and was for several years jail physician.

The day after the United States entered the war, Dr. Griswold offered his services to the government and he received his commission May 21, 1917. He was assigned to Camp Dix, where he rendered service that led to his recommendation for a captaincy and his transfer to the grade of first assistant surgeon to Major Howard Collins, head of the base hospital. It was probably this change that hastened his death as it was necessary for him to walk about fifteen miles a day in performance of his duty, a task which was more than his constitution could stand. He obtained sick leave from Camp Dix, where he was chief sanitary officer, and went to his home in Morristown, N. J., suffering from a complication of pneumonia and meningitis. He died two days later at his home, Oct. 25, 1917.

ARTHUR STEELE DASCOMB

Captain, Quartermaster Corps.

Born Dec. 29, 1872. While in college he was a member of Kappa Kappa Kappa. After leaving Dartmouth, he studied at Chicago Theological Seminary, the University of Chicago and the University of Edinburgh. He held two short pastorates in the Congregational ministry, then went into business in Oklahoma. Later he became vice-president of a lumber company in San Antonio, Texas.

When the United States entered the war, he applied for service in the Quartermaster Corps and was commissioned captain. He was put in charge of construction work at Camp Stanley and was transferred to Fort Bliss in Dec., 1917, where he was engaged in similar work. In the summer of 1918, worn out and broken down with the heavy responsibilities, he became ill and in the second week of August was taken to the hospital for an operation for appendicitis. Serious complications followed the operation and he died Aug. 20, 1918.

JAMES REUBEN WOODWORTH

Private, Infantry.

Born June 6, 1875. He attended Dartmouth only a short time, taking practically the whole of his college course at Oberlin College and receiving his degree from Oberlin in 1897. He was a member of Sigma Chi. After graduation he held various positions in the railway service as cashier, traffic manager, freight agent and as traveling railway auditor. In 1911 he became a teller in the Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City, Mo., and was there when the war broke out.

He enlisted June 15, 1917, as a private in Co. K of the 137th Infantry and received his training at Camp Doniphan, Okla. He was sent overseas and was killed in action in the Argonne Forest, France, Sept. 28, 1918.

HENRY REUBEN WESTON

Major, Medical Corps.

Born March 13, 1878. He prepared at the high school in Windsor, Vt. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. After graduation from college, he taught biology for a year at Dartmouth, then studied medicine at New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College, receiving his M. D. in 1903. He practiced medicine in Windsor, Vt., until 1908 when he enlisted in the Medical Corps of the regular U. S. Army. He served in various parts of America and in the Philippines. In 1914 he asked to be put on the inactive list, because of illness in his family, and returned to Windsor, Vt.

When the United States entered the war, he enlisted in the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps April 30, 1917, as captain. He was stationed at various camps and finally became assistant camp surgeon at Camp Humphreys in June, 1918. In the fall he was commissioned major. During the influenza epidemic he was called home to Windsor by the illness of his wife. While there he himself was taken sick and died Nov. 28, 1918.

ROBERT ALLAN FRENCH

Captain, Intelligence Service.

Born Sept. 1, 1882. Prepared at the high school in Nashua, N. H. In college he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and for two years he was manager of the Dramatic Club. After graduation he attended Harvard Law School, receiving his degree in 1908. Then he returned to Nashua and practiced law with his father, George B. French '72.

He enlisted in the National Army as a private in the spring of 1918, but failed to pass the physical examination. Later he underwent an operation to make himself physically fit and was commissioned captain July 29, 1918, in the Military Intelligence Branch of the General Staff at Washington. He died of pneumonia, after a very short illness, Dec. 17, 1918, in Washington, D. C.

CONRAD PHILIP HAZEN

Cadet, Aviation.

Born April 7, 1884. Prepared in the high school at Hanover and at Kimball Union Academy. He was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. After graduation he studied mechanics and electricity at Columbia University. Then he was associated with different firms in New York City until 1913, when he entered the employ of the New York Telephone Company. He was a second lieutenant in the New York National Guard and went to the Mexican border with that unit.

In July, 1917, he resigned his commission in the National Guard and enlisted as a private first class in the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps. He received some training at the Georgia School of Technology and then went to France in the fall of 1917. On Feb. 11, 1918, while still in training he met with an accident while flying alone and was killed instantly.

HENRY VIRGIL BOGUE

Lieutenant, Naval Medical Corps.

Born June 5, 1884. Prepared at the high school in Newport, Vt. After studying at Dartmouth Medical School about two years, he went to Baltimore Medical College where he received his M. D. in 1909.

He was commissioned in the Naval Reserve Force as an assistant surgeon with the rank of lieutenant (j. g.) Aug. 28, 1918, and was ordered to active duty at the Naval Hospital, Mare Island, Calif., Sept. 5, 1918, where he died on Jan. 9, 1919, of influenza.

KARL HERBERT PITCHER

Sergeant, Field Artillery.

Born Sept. 6, 1885. Prepared at the high school in Haverhill, Mass. While in college he was a member of Chi Phi. After leaving Dartmouth he studied medicine for one term at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City. Later he became associated with the C. K. Fox Shoe Co. in Haverhill.

He enlisted April 9, 1917, as a private in Battery A of the 102nd Field Artillery and was sent to Camp Curtis Guild for training. He was promoted to corporal, July, 1917, and to mess sergeant, October, 1917. He sailed for France in September, 1917 and about a month before his death was transferred to the firing line. While a mess sergeant he received a citation from the Division Quartermaster, commending him as having the most efficient and best organized detachment in the 26th Division.

On Sept. 3, 1918, he was taken ill and sent to an evacuation hospital, later being moved to Base Hospital No. 50 at Mesves, France, where he died Sept. 29, 1918.

GEORGE ELLIOTT SHIPLEY

Second Lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps.

Born Oct. 14, 1883. Prepared at Oak Park High School, Oak Park, Ill. At college he was on the track team three years and on the relay team. In his senior year he was vice-president of his class. He was a member of Palaeopitus, Alpha Delta Phi, Turtle and Casque and Gauntlet. After graduation he was connected with Butler Bros., a mail order house of Chicago. He served on the Mexican border with Battery E of the 1st Illinois Field Artillery.

In August, 1917, he enlisted and received training at Ft. Sheridan. He was commissioned second lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps, attached to the 304th Sanitary Train, 79th Division. He sailed for France in July, 1918, and on the 25th was transferred from the Sanitary Train and ordered to report at 5th Army Headquarters.

where he received orders to go to 1st Army Headquarters. The 79th Division was meeting with difficulty and Lt. Shipley was able to transfer to the infantry. He was attached to Co. B, 4th Infantry, 3d Division, which had replaced the 79th Division, and to a platoon which was to go over the top in an attack on October 11th. The officers had all been killed or were casualties, so Lt. Shipley led the platoon over, gaining the objective, but being instantly killed when it was reached, at Mt. Faucon, Argonne Forest, Oct. 11, 1918. It is reported that he was recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross.

First Lieutenant, Infantry.

Born Jan. 19, 1886. After receiving a public school education in Cincinnati and Chicago, he entered Dartmouth. He played on his class football and baseball teams, and was manager of his class hockey team. He became a member of Delta Tau Delta. For two years after leaving college he was coach at Norwich University. He then went to the Chandler Motor Car Co., as a salesman.

Early in the fall of 1917 he entered the second Officers' Training Camp at Ft. Sheridan, where he received a commission as first lieutenant. He sailed for France with the 318th Infantry, May 15, 1918. Arriving overseas, he took a two months' course in a French military school and then returned to his regiment. On the night of Nov. 3, 1918, when he and other officers were sitting around a camp fire, a shell exploded in their midst, severely wounding Lieutenant Turner. He refused to be sent back to the hospital. The next morning he led his platoon over the top and was instantly killed by a shell. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross posthumously, "for extraordinary heroism in action near Buzancy."

LESTER SHERWOOD WASS

Captain, Marine Corps.

Born June 25, 1886. Prepared in the high school at Gloucester. At college he became a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

After leaving college he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Marines and was stationed at Port Royal, S. C., in 1909. Later he was stationed at Portsmouth, N. H., and then sent to the Philippines. He was with the Marines in Haiti and was under fire at Vera Cruz. Shortly after leaving Vera Cruz he was commissioned first lieutenant, and just before going to France in 1917 he was in line for promotion to major because of his long foreign service. He took part in the fighting at Chateau-Thierry and at Belleau Wood. He was killed in action, July 18, 1918, near Vierzy in the Soissons drive.

KENNEDY CONKLIN

Sergeant, Infantry.

Born June 25, 1888. Prepared at Holbrook Academy. He went to Union College in Schenectady and transferred to Dartmouth. At Union he was a member of Chi Psi fraternity. After leaving college he was a salesman with the Bidwell-Conklin Company of New York City. In November, 1916, he enlisted in the National Guard of New York as a private in the 7th Infantry, and went with that unit to the Mexican border.

He enlisted June 22, 1917, and went to Camp Wadsworth for training. He was promoted to corporal in November, 1917, and to sergeant in April, 1918, and had been ordered to report to an officers' training school shortly before his death. He went to France in May, 1918, and took part in the engagements of Mont Kemmel, Dickebusch Lake, and the final drive against the Hindenburg Line. It was in this last fierce fighting that he was severely wounded Sept. 30, 1918. After lying helpless two days and a night in No Man's Land, he was evacuated to British General Hospital No. 8, Rouen, where he died from his wounds on October 12th.

THOMAS START KNOX

Private, Ordnance Department.

Born Sept. 19, 1888. He prepared at the high school in Jackson, Minn. He went to Carleton College for two years, then transferred to Dartmouth, where he became a member of the football squad and of the Glee Club. He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Casque and Gauntlet. For several years after graduation he looked after the extensive farm interests of his father, and later became assistant cashier in the Brown National Bank of Jackson, Minn.

He made application to enter the Officers' Training Camp at Minneapolis on June 17, 1917, but was refused admittance on account of defective eyesight. He then applied to the Ordnance Department but it was only after a year that he was finally accepted on Sept. 3, 1918. Enlisting as a private in Co. E of the 3rd Provisional Regiment of the Ordnance Department, he was sent to Camp Hancock, Ga., for training. Although in service but a brief period, it was expected that he would soon be sent to an Officers' Training Camp. He was taken ill, however, and removed to the Base Hospital at Camp Hancock, where he died of a complication of scarlet fever and bronchial pneumonia on Nov. 19, 1918.

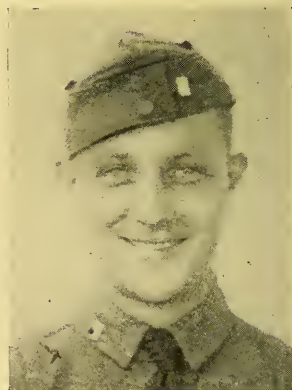

STURGIS PISHON

First Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born May 30, 1888. Prepared at Boston English High School. While in college he was on his class football, baseball, and hockey teams, and the varsity football team, and was known as one of the greatest quarterbacks of his time. He was a member of the Dramatic Club and took part in Prom shows and the Society Circus. He was a member of Theta Delta Chi, Casque and Gauntlet, and Phi Beta Kappa. He was elected permanent secretary of his class, became a leader in Boston alumni affairs, and was chorister for many Dartmouth gatherings. After graduation he entered the wool business in Boston and then associated himself with a prominent advertising firm of Boston.

He enlisted as a private on August 8, 1917, in the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps at the Ground School connected with Cornell University. Graduating with a special recommendation to the War Department, he was sent to France in October 1917. He studied for some months at Issoudun, France, and was then transferred to Foggia, Italy, where he was one of the first detachment of American aviators to train with Italian officers. After completing his course of instruction at Foggia, he returned to Issoudun, France, and received his commission as first lieutenant in May 1918. Later he was sent to St. Jean de Monts for training in aerial gunnery. It was here that the accident occurred on Oct. 26, 1918, in which he was killed. The cause of the accident has not been reported but the plane crashed and death was almost instantaneous. The burial was in the American section of the French Military Cemetery at St. Jean de Monts, Department Vendee.

RAYMOND WHITON THOMPSON

Second Lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps.

Born Aug. 8, 1888. Prepared at Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J. At college he became a member of Alpha Delta Phi. After graduation he was associated with his father in business in Concord, N. H.

In June, 1917, he came back to Hanover and took the Military Stores course given by Tuck School. He enlisted Aug. 6, 1917, as a sergeant in the Quartermaster Corps. From December, 1917 to June, 1918, he was at Camp Joseph E. Johnston at Jacksonville, Fla., where he was commissioned second lieutenant, June 6, 1918. He then went to the Boston Department, where he remained until he was taken ill with influenza and pneumonia, from which he died at the Lancaster Hospital, Brookline, Mass., on Sept. 13, 1918.

CHARLES HENRY AYER

Private, Infantry.

Born Oct. 12, 1887. He prepared at Stevens High School, Claremont, N. H. At Dartmouth he became a member of Sigma Nu. After leaving college, he was for a time in St. Louis, but later returned to Claremont, where he became proprietor of a restaurant.

He entered the service March 29, 1918, and was assigned as a private to the 325th Infantry. He trained at Camp Devens and Camp Upton and went overseas in April, 1918. He was killed in action in the Argonne Forest, Oct. 16, 1918.

EDWARD FRANKLIN CHASE

Captain, Coast Artillery Corps.

Born June 4, 1887. Prepared at Lynn English High School. While in college he was a member of the Mandolin Club for four years, and of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. After leaving college he joined the First Corps Cadets in Boston and became prominent in National Guard affairs. He was in the insurance business and later became associated with A. Shuman Company and Wm. Filene's Sons.

At the outbreak of the war he was studying in the Coast Artillery School at Fortress Monroe, Va. He was commissioned second lieutenant, Oct. 24, 1917. Later he was transferred to Fort Andrews, Boston Harbor, where he was commissioned captain and was commander of the 26th Co., Coast Artillery Corps. He died there of heart failure while playing tennis, Aug. 31, 1918.

FREDERICK WHIDDEN GRANT

Captain, Signal Corps.

Born May 29, 1887. Prepared at Winchester High School. While in college he was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity and was associated with dramatic activities. After graduation he became plant engineer with the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone Company of Texas.

He enlisted Sept. 20, 1917, at San Antonio, Texas, as first lieutenant in the Signal Corps, unassigned, and was promoted to the rank of captain. He was executive officer at Camp Morse for some time, but was transferred to Camp Meade. He had much to do with the wiring of the camps in Texas. He died of influenza at Camp Meade, Md., Oct. 7, 1918.

JOHN ALVORD ROSE

Sergeant, Chemical Warfare Service.

Born June 20, 1888. Prepared at the high school at Concord, Mass. After leaving college, he was a chemist with the Arthur Little Analytical Chemists Co., and later became assistant state gas inspector. He was a corporal in the Massachusetts National Guard.

He enlisted as a corporal in the Chemical Warfare Service, Oct. 3, 1917, was promoted to sergeant and to sergeant first class, and his commission was pending at the time of his death. He was stationed for a while with the Ambulance Service at Allentown, Pa., but was sent overseas in January, 1918. He was one of ten men selected to go to London to supervise the manufacture of gas masks. While there he perfected the canister of the gas masks. He was returning from a furlough in Ireland on the R. M. S. Leinster, when the ship was torpedoed on Oct. 10, 1918, and sunk. He was last seen struggling in the rough sea holding a girl above water. His body was recovered October 11, and was buried in Dublin, Ireland.

WILLIAM THOMAS STILLMAN

Quartermaster 3d Class, U. S. N. R. F.

Born Aug. 3, 1888. Prepared at the high school in Bridgeport, Conn. While in college, he was vice-president of his class junior and senior years. He was a member of Psi Upsilon and Dragon. After graduation he worked for Hincks Bros. & Co., bond dealers in Bridgeport. In 1913 he became assistant manager of the Hartford office of the American Surety Company, and in 1916 became manager of their Providence office.

He enlisted as quartermaster 3d class, in the U. S. N. R. F., May 1, 1918, and was assigned to the Naval Training Station at Newport. He was put on the oil tanker S. S. Frederick R. Kellogg to study navigation before going to an officers' training school and was on board when it was torpedoed by a German submarine off Barnegat, N. J., Aug. 13, 1918. He was killed, but his body was recovered and taken home for burial.

First Lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Born Sept. 16, 1890. Prepared at the high school in Turners Falls, Mass. While in college he was especially noted for his musical ability and for a time attended Montreal College, Montreal, Canada, to perfect himself in music. At Dartmouth he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta. After graduation he accepted a position with the Travellers' Insurance Company, working for them in Hartford, Conn., Springfield, Mass., and Kansas City, Mo. He was advanced to the position of cashier, which position he was holding in Kansas City at the time of his enlistment.

He enlisted May 12, 1917, in the Officers' Training Camp at Ft. Riley, Kan., and was commissioned second lieutenant Aug. 15, 1917. The adjutant was compelled to be absent from the post a great deal, and when he was away Lieut. Jacobus was acting adjutant, a position of importance, since it handled practically all the business of the post. He was transferred to Camp Funston where he became assistant adjutant and intelligence officer for the 342nd Field Artillery. He was later sent to Camp Custer, where he was promoted to first lieutenant and assigned to the 342nd Field Artillery, with which unit he went to France in May, 1918. This unit saw much hard service and was made part of the Army of Occupation. Because of his knowledge of French and German, he was made billeting officer and reconnaissance officer of his battery in charge of the preparation of maps. He was taken ill in Alsdorf, Germany, and sent back to the hospital at Treves, Franch, where he died Dec. 24, 1918, of pneumonia.

Ambulance Driver, American Field Service.

Born in 1890. Prepared at Anglo-Saxon School in Paris. At college he was a member of the Cercle Francais, on the Jack-O'-Lantern board and manager of the Gun Team. He was also a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and Round Robin. After graduation he entered Harvard Law School. Immediately after receiving his degree in 1915 from Harvard, he returned to France.

In France he joined the American Field Service as an ambulance driver, S. S. U. 1 and 8, in which capacity he served until the time of his death, with the exception of a few months in the spring of 1916 when he returned to the United States for a visit. In the summer of 1916 he underwent an operation for appendicitis and another for an injury acquired through lifting loaded stretchers, then was in a hospital for weeks with chicken pox and grippe, but as soon as possible he returned to the front. Shortly before Christmas he caught a cold which developed into pneumonia, from which he died Dec. 23, 1916. He was buried on Christmas Day with full military honors, in the Argonne near Verdun. On Jan. 11, 1917, he was cited in army orders of the day as follows: "Devoted and courageous, he was sent to the rear ill. He returned again to the front after his recovery, contracted a grave malady, and died for France." He was awarded the Croix de Guerre posthumously. Sufficient money was collected from his classmates and friends to endow a bed in a French hospital in his memory.

Private, Infantry.

Born Sept. 10, 1889. Prepared at the high school in Westbrook, Me. While in college he was a member of the Glee Club and also took part in the production of "Oedipus Tyrannus." acknowledged to be a dangerous mission. On carrying out the order the following day he was hit by a shell and instantly killed, and two of the men of his party severely wounded, Aug. 25, 1918.

RUSSELL DEXTER TIBBETTS

Ensign, Naval Aviation.

Born Jan. 17, 1893. Prepared at Central High School, Washington, D. C. After leaving college he accepted a position as bank clerk and began the study of law. Later he became part owner of a Ford auto agency which he opened in Washington and in which he had completed a successful business year at the time of his enlistment.

He enlisted April, 1918, as a cadet in Naval Aviation. He graduated from the Naval Ground School at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and was licensed as a qualified pilot. He completed his flying course at the naval training station at Pensacola, Florida, where he was commissioned ensign, and sent to the Naval Air Station at Cape May, N. J. On Oct. 8, 1918, he was lost at sea in seaplane No. 1210, while on patrol as pilot. In the course of a lapse of time of three minutes his plane was lost sight of by the observer in his companion's machine. This machine immediately turned retraced the course and made a careful search in the endeavor to locate him, but without success. The seaplane was last seen thirty miles northeast of Ocean City, Md., and twenty miles off shore. It is thought that because of some accident the plane with its three occupants fell into the sea and sank. No trace of it was found, although a thorough search was conducted for days afterwards.

WALTER YORK

Ambulance Driver, Norton-Harjes Ambulance Corps—Second Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born Jan. 13, 1894. Prepared at the high school in Somerville, Mass. At college he was a member of the football squad and of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

In February, 1916, he left college and sailed for France, where he enlisted in the Norton-Harjes Ambulance Corps, attached to the 21st Division of the French Army, March 2, 1916. He served three months during the terrific fighting at Verdun and three months in the Champagne. After a short visit to the United States he returned for an additional four months in the same service. Returning to America just after the United States had declared war, he enlisted in the United States naval aviation corps and was one of the first twenty to begin training at Squantum in May 1917. In June he secured his discharge and returned to France, where he joined the Lafayette Flying Corps, June 18, 1917. After training at various schools he went to the front in the winter. He was promoted to corporal, Dec. 2, 1917, to sergeant, Jan. 15, 1918, and received a commission as second lieutenant Oct. 11, 1918. He was one of the very few Americans who were commissioned in the Lafayette Flying Corps. He was officially accredited with 122 hours over the German lines and was decorated with the Croix de Guerre with palm. In December, 1918, he returned to the United States on leave. He never went back to France, securing his discharge from the French Army through French authorities in this country. On the trip home he was taken ill with pneumonia and never fully recovered his health. He died of tuberculosis at Saranac Lake, N. Y., Jan. 6, 1921. It was only when he became seriously ill, that he told of the fact that he had been gassed while driving an ambulance in France.

JOSEPH WELCH EMERY, JR.

First Lieutenant, Infantry.

Born Jan. 12, 1896. Prepared at the high school in Quincy, Ill. At college he was on the Freshman Football Team, the Freshman Golf Team, the Varsity Track Team and the Varsity Football Team. He was a member of the Third Honor Group and was vice-president of his class for two years. He belonged to Phi Gamma Delta and Sphinx.

He entered the Plattsburg training camp in May, 1917 and was commissioned second lieutenant in August. He was assigned to the 9th Infantry, with which unit he sailed for France on Sept. 6, 1917. After special training in signal work, he was sent to the front with his regiment. On July 18, 1918, he voluntarily joined an assaulting battalion, near Vierzy, as platoon leader of a company which was short of officers. When all the other officers had become casualties, he took command of the company and while rushing an enemy position at the head of his men, he was killed by machine gun bullets. For his heroism he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross posthumously.

HENRY MURRAY WILLIAMS 1918
Private, Infantry (Machine Gun)—Intelligence Section.

Born June 19, 1896. Prepared at the Soldan School, St. Louis, Mo. At Dartmouth he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. At the end of freshman year he transferred to the University of Missouri.

He enlisted May 17, 1917, in the 5th Regiment of the Missouri National Guard and was inducted into federal service August 4th. He was first attached to the machine gun company of the 138th Infantry, but in April, 1918, was transferred to headquarters detachment of the 35th Division, Intelligence Section, as a divisional intelligence observer. In France his detachment saw service in the Gerardmer sector in the Vosges Mountains, in the advance to the St. Mihiel salient, and in the occupation of Vauquois in the battle of the Argonne. The work of the detachment consisted in keeping well to the front in all actions in order to observe and report promptly, by runners, to the commanding general, all activities of the enemy. "On the morning of the 26th of September, 1918, Private Williams had already carried a message to Captain Gunther Meier, and on returning, he learned that Major Sauerwein and his battalion were lost from communication with the General. He then volunteered to find the Major and hold back the infantry. It was on this mission that he was killed, wounded first by machine gun fire and then killed by shrapnel."

Camion Driver, American Field Service—First Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born April 20, 1896. Prepared at the Howe School, Howe, Ind. He spent two years at the University of Illinois, transferring to Dartmouth in 1916. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi.

He enlisted in the American Field Service in May, 1917, as an ambulance driver, but owing to lack of ambulances, he was assigned to a munitions truck, which he drove for four months in France. Upon his release, he entered a French school for aviation and later trained at Clermont-Farrand under American auspices. He was commissioned first lieutenant in the American Air Service and assigned to the 96th Aero Squadron, which was the first American bombing squadron to go into action at the front. On his last flight with three other planes, from Armanty, Sept. 16, 1918, he encountered a squadron of twenty-four German scout planes. His machine received a broadside from two enemy planes simultaneously and burst into flames, killing him and his companion instantly.

Camion Driver, American Field Service—Private, Field Artillery.

Born Nov. 6, 1895. Prepared at the high school in Waltham, Mass. At Dartmouth he was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

He enlisted in the American Field Service and sailed for France with the third Dartmouth unit, June 2, 1917. He served as a camion driver in Sections 184 and 526, T. M. U., until November 16th. When the Service was taken over by the American Army, he made repeated efforts to enlist, but was rejected on account of defective eyesight. Finally, on Dec. 5, 1917, he was accepted and assigned to the 103d Field Artillery, 26th Division, as a cannoneer. He was constantly on duty until Oct. 24, 1918, when he was instantly killed beside his gun by an enemy shell.

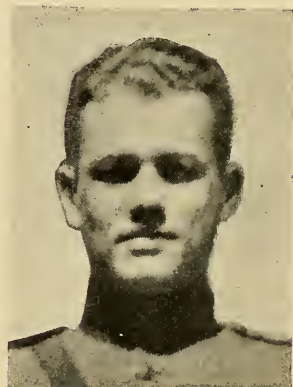

STAFFORD LEIGHTON BROWN

Ambulance Driver, American Field Service—Second Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born Oct. 25, 1895. Prepared at the high school in Newton, Mass. At Dartmouth he was a member of Phi Delta Theta. In 1916 he transferred to the University of Vermont.

He enlisted in the American Field Service as an ambulance driver, March 12, 1917, serving in Sections 17 and 19 for five months. Later, he enlisted in the Lafayette Flying Corps, in which he served until Sept. 12, 1917. Upon being released from the Flying Corps, he joined the U. S. Air Service and received a commission as second lieutenant. He was killed on Sept. 28, 1918, when his plane, because of a defect, crashed to the ground.

PHILIP BERNARD FROTHINGHAM

Ensign, Naval Aviation.

Born Aug. 9, 1894. Prepared at the high school in Portland, Me., and at Hebron Academy. At college he was a member of Kappa Kappa Kappa.

He enlisted in Naval Aviation shortly after the United States entered the war, and received training at various fields in Canada and the United States. He was commissioned ensign. For some time he was engaged in patrol work on the English coast, but later transferred to army aviation. After being trained in England for bombing work, he was sent to Dunkirk with a British bombing squadron for active service. This duty was followed by additional bombing training in Italy, after which he returned to France, crossing the Alps with the first flying squadron to make the trip by plane. He was killed Sept. 14, 1918, at St.

Inglevert, France, when his plane caught fire.

FRED COOK GILPATRIC, JR.

Private, Infantry.

Born March 8, 1897. Prepared at Boston Latin School. At Dartmouth he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha.

He enlisted Sept. 3, 1918, as a private in the infantry, and was sent to the Central Officers' Training School at Camp Lee, Va., where he died of influenza on Sept. 27, 1918.

ERNEST ARMAND GIROUX

Sergeant, American Field Service—First Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born Dec. 4, 1895. Prepared at the high school in Somerville, Mass. At college he joined Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

He sailed for France, April 21, 1917, planning to drive an ambulance in the American Field Service. On arrival he found the need of drivers more urgent in the camion branch so served with Section 526, T. M. U., for three months, with the rank of sergeant. When the United States entered the war, he transferred to the Air Service and in February, 1918, was commissioned first lieutenant. He was one of ten flyers selected to do exhibition flying for General Pershing and Secretary of War Baker, when the latter visited the front. In March he was sent to Paris for special aviation work and on April 7th was assigned to the 103d Pursuit Squadron, formerly the Lafayette Escadrille.

He made his last flight on May 22, 1918, when he was shot down in a combat with enemy planes, inside the German lines. For his last exploit he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, posthumously. His citation tells the story of the combat: "Lieutenant Giroux, while on patrol with four other scout planes, attacked an enemy formation of eight monoplane machines. Two of Lieutenant Giroux's companions were forced to retire when their guns became jammed. Despite numerical superiority, Lieutenant Giroux continued the attack endeavoring to protect his leader until finally forced down and killed." He was also awarded the Croix de Guerre.

WARREN TUCKER HOBBS

Camion Driver, American Field Service—First Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born Nov. 3, 1895. Prepared at the Classical High School and Worcester Academy, Worcester, Mass. At Dartmouth he won his "D" on the Track Team. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

He enlisted with the Dartmouth ambulance unit May 5, 1917, in the American Field Service for three months with Section 526, T. M. U. He later tried to enlist in the United States Air Service, but was rejected twice on account of his size and weight. He finally succeeded in being accepted by the Lafayette Flying Corps and went to the front Dec. 8, 1917, and on Jan. 23, 1918, was mustered into the American service. He was then transferred to Paris for aviation duty, but later sent back to the front on scout duty, bomb-dropping and raiding over the German trenches. On June 26, 1918, he was forced to fly low over the German lines because of engine trouble, and was shot down by anti-aircraft guns.

FRANK PLANT McCREERY

First Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born May 28, 1894. Prepared at Princeton Preparatory School, Princeton, N. J. At Dartmouth he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon. After leaving college he became a traveling salesman for the Chevrolet motor company.

He enlisted April 10, 1917, as a sergeant in the Aviation service and was commissioned first lieutenant, July 27, 1917. He was assigned to the 19th Aero Squadron, with which he sailed for France in December, 1917. At the time of his death he was a ferry pilot and considered one of the best in the American forces. He was killed May 11, 1918, while manouvering with Lt. William Ponder, Dartmouth '17. Lt. McCreery came up too close under Lt. Ponder's machine, so that his control wires were cut by the propellor, rendering his plane unmanageable.

DONALD MANSFIELD McMAHON

Seaman, U. S. N. R. F.

Born Oct. 18, 1896. Prepared at the high school in Stowe, Vt. At Dartmouth he played in the Freshman Mandolin Club, the Varsity Mandolin Club and the College Orchestra. He was a member of the Dramatic Association and of Kappa Kappa Kappa.

He enlisted first in Naval Aviation, but as his papers did not come, he changed to the United States Naval Reserve Force in June, 1918, and was sent to Hingham, Wakefield, Bumkin Island and Bar Harbor for training. While waiting at Bar Harbor for his papers in order to transfer to the S. A. T. C. at Dartmouth, he was taken ill with influenza, which developed into pneumonia, and he died Oct. 14, 1918, after an illness of only five days.

WAINWRIGHT MERRILL

Gunner, Canadian Artillery.

Born May 26, 1898. Prepared at the Cambridge High and Latin School, Cambridge, Mass. After one year at Dartmouth, he transferred to Harvard in the fall of 1916.

He enlisted in November, 1916, in the Canadian field artillery as a gunner, under the name of Arthur A. Stanley. From May to October, 1917, he was in English training camps. He transferred to a heavy artillery regiment, with which he was sent to France in October. On Nov. 6, 1917, an old cellar in Ypres, in which he was sleeping was struck by a shell, and he was buried in the debris. He was immediately dug out and rushed to No. 6 Canadian Field Ambulance, but died shortly after his arrival. He was the author of "A College Man in Khaki."

THOMAS CUSHMAN NATHAN

Quartermaster, U. S. N. R. F.—Qualified Aviator, Naval Aviation.

Born May 7, 1897. Prepared at the high school in Bellows Falls, Vt., and at St. John's School, Danvers, Mass. At college he was a member of Phi Delta Theta.

He enlisted in March, 1917, as a quartermaster third class in the Naval Reserve, but transferred to the Naval Air Service in March, 1918. He received training at the Ground School at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from which he graduated May 25th. He then went to Key West, Miami and Pensacola, Fla., for instruction in flying. He had nearly finished his training and was having practice in night flying, when he was killed on Aug. 13, 1918. His plane turned turtle as it struck the water and the boats that went to his aid were unable to right the plane in time to resuscitate him.

ROBERT AUGUSTUS HATCH

Grenadier, Marine Corps

Born Aug. 21, 1897. Prepared at the high school in Randolph, Vt. At Dartmouth he was a member of Psi Upsilon.

He enlisted April 29, 1918, as a private in the Marine Corps. After training at Paris Island, S. C., and Quantico, Va., he sailed for France, where he was assigned to the 5th Regiment of Marines, as a grenadier. His letters show that he had been in some very heavy fighting. He died Oct. 5, 1918, of wounds received in action.

BENJAMIN HIESTAND

Radio Operator, Naval Radio Service—Sergeant, Ammunition Train—Second Lieutenant, Aviation.

Born Aug. 11, 1897. Prepared at Franklin and Marshall Academy, Lancaster, Pa. At college he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta.

He enlisted in March, 1917, as a radio operator in the Mosquito Fleet, Naval Reserve. He was sent to Portsmouth and to Harvard for radio training and in June, 1918, secured a medical discharge on account of serious illness. Upon his recovery he enlisted in the Ammunition Train of the Pennsylvania Guards as headquarters sergeant, and was ordered to Camp Hancock. He then transferred to Aviation and was trained at Kelly Field, Texas, in flying. He received his commission as second lieutenant and was recommended for pursuit work, but as no schools were ready, he was sent to Dorr Field, Fla., as an instructor in flying. There he was killed in an airplane accident on June 10, 1918. The government flying field at Fort Meyer, Fla., was subsequently named Hiestand Field in his honor.
